

ENVoY: Your Personal Guide to Classroom Management

*Classroom management has never been easier.
Pick up new management skills and refine those you already have.*

About the program:

Looking for EASY and PRACTICAL behavior management strategies? Learn how to use over 10 patterns of nonverbal communication that really work! These skills preserve the most powerful leverage point of educators: relationships. Learn why nonverbal strategies are even more effective than verbal management. Educators love ENVoY because the strategies create an atmosphere where less time is spent on management and more time is spent learning.

Course Objectives:

The non-verbal communication skills offered in this training will positively influence the single most powerful leverage point in education – the teacher-student relationship. Teachers who systematically utilize the full range of non-verbal management skills are better able to reinforce consistent and fair parameters while preserving their relationship with each student, regardless of unique learning styles or cultural backgrounds.

Benefits:

- Teachers will have less stress and more energy
- Teachers will establish and preserve positive relationships with students, parents and colleagues
- Students will become more productive and spend more time on task
- Students will become self-directed and responsible for their learning

About the instructor:

Michael Grinder is an author and world renowned expert in the science of non-verbal communication, non-verbal leadership, group dynamics, advanced relationship building & presentation skills.*

Session Dates:

November 5,
November 12,
December 2,
December 9

Session Times:

4:30-7:30

Location:

Library;
Straub MS
1920 Wilmington
Ave NW Salem,
OR 97304

Register for this course on the Academy of Teaching and Learning

Questions?

Please contact Holly Smucker (smucker_holly@salkeiz.k12.or.us)
or Sheryle White at 503-399-3061.